

Cook Islands

The Cook Islands is a reliable and flexible offshore jurisdiction, benefiting from political stability and strong legal ties to New Zealand's common law. It is highly regarded for its robust asset protection laws and zero-tax corporate environment, imposing no corporate income, capital gains, or withholding tax on foreign profits. Setting up an International Business Company (IBC) is fast and fully remote, typically taking 3-4 business days.

Registering a Cook Islands offshore company provides significant fiscal advantages, as the jurisdiction imposes no corporate income tax, no capital gains tax, and no withholding tax on foreign-sourced profits. The incorporation process is fast and fully remote; an International Business Company (IBC) is typically established in just three to four business days, with documents delivered electronically for immediate global use.
